Workshop

The COVID-19 outbreak is showing us the need to step up investments in health promotion and disease prevention, reinforcing our health systems preparedness, responsiveness and resilience, ensuring cross-border cooperation across Europe. Solidarity and equity are key to face this major world health crisis and its devastating socio-economic consequences. Cohesion policy as one of the main instruments to achieve the EU treaty objective of economic, social, and territorial cohesion, offers regions and cities the opportunity to allocate resources for the health and social care systems of tomorrow.

In the current programming period 2014-2020, the European Social Fund (ESF) and the European Regional Development Fund (ERDF) covered substantial health investments in improving access to healthcare, developing specialised health infrastructure and capacities reducing health inequalities, and boosting healthcare reforms for around €9 billion, demonstrating the crucial contribution of cohesion policy in supporting social and economic convergence around Europe and promoting the health of EU citizens. The potential of investments in public health and reducing health inequalities, however, were sub-optimal, leaving room for further advancement.

The workshop aims at discussing therefore how best to improve the use the ESI Funds 2021-2027 for innovative investments in health and social inclusion-enabling structures, methods and approaches, also in light of the new challenges set by the COVID-19 pandemic.
